3 of 3 review helpful A major work on Venetian Renaissance architecture by a pedagogue that would have been infinitely more useful to the Anglophone reader if it had not been given such an awful translation from the Italian. Not only does the translator frequently misconstrue idiomatic expressions so that the author's ambitious socio-cultural interpretations come out sounding rather goofy but often enough the meaning gets lost. In this study of the process of decision making about building and urban planning in Venice the author examines the intersections of Venetian culture from the beginning of the 16th century to the first decades of the 17th to show how that process affected the choice of designers and styles. Influential doges such as Andrea Gritti and Leonardo Dona architects and artists like Sansovino Serlio Palladio and Scamozzi and scientists Francesco Barozzi and Galileo all figure. From Library Journal In this series of insightful but at times inaccessible essays Tafuri considers some of the principal architectural projects and proposals of late Renaissance Venice. Armed with a powerful intellect and a profound command of the
