period of time between 1840s to the 1860s when Italy unified itself into a singular nation. The book traced this from the Napoleonic Period where the seeds were initially planted to the final event when the French withdrew from Rome in 1870 allowing the Italians to regain their foremost city and making it the Unification of Italy in the nineteenth century was the unlikely result of a lengthy and complex process of Italian 'revival' ('Risorgimento'). Few Italians supported Unification and the new rulers of Italy were unable to resolve their disputes with the Catholic Church, the local power holders in the South and the peasantry. In this fascinating account Martin Clark examines these problems and considers how the Back Cover The Unification of Italy in the nineteenth century was the unlikely result of a lengthy and complex process of Italian 'revival' ('Risorgimento').
