This volume explores aspects of the devotional world of late medieval northern Europe with a special emphasis on how people interacted with texts images artifacts and other instruments of piety at the level of the senses. The book focuses on the materiality of medieval religion and the manner in which Christians were encouraged to engage their senses in their devotional practices gazing hearing touching tasting and committing to memory. In so doing it brings to One of the very lovely things about this volume is the way in which the authors interact with each other's work both commenting on and building upon ideas across the articles. This is not just a collection of articles around a particular theme but a v
